The last remaining Tu-154M used by the government fleet has been rotting on a military airport for the last 10 years. A group of enthusiasts has disassembled (not cut apart!) the aircraft to the bare hull even though the manufacturer told them that it is not possible to do it in such extent. This footage is from the day when it was brought to the site of the aircraft museum in Kunovice. This video ends with the convoy entering the Kunovice airport perimeter, from where it is just a short taxiway to the aircraft museum.

This aircraft became famous by bringing back our olympionics from Nagano WOH 1998 where our hockey players earned a gold medal.

Fun fact: The yellow VB cars are historic-style police cars as the police was called Veřejná Bezpečnost (public security) in the communist era.
